

Unified Communication systems in a nutshell

Unified Communications is affordable secure connectivity -- anytime, anyhow and everywhere.

Your challenges

- o Affordability involved in maintaining a network of communications systems that is always available across the state, country or even globally
- o Communication bottlenecks caused by incompatible systems and devices that impact collaboration efforts
- o Complex layers of licensing and maintenance service costs
- o Increased mobility of employees result in it being harder to keep in contact with for key decisions and updates

What Unified Communications solutions offer:

Connectivity

Be on the same page with your team, customers and vendors for discussions, meetings or troubleshoots whenever and wherever you may be. Whether it is messaging, IP telephony, video conferencing, team portals, sharing of desktops or presentations and training that is the preferred communication means, it is all available at one's finger tips. No one party has to be physically present at a group meet, they just need to show up at the video conference.

Security and Media rich access

Security is built in throughout your network from the infrastructure upwards into the communications applications. Thus, assuring safe accessibility to the corporate system from anywhere in any work space of choice, be it on desktops, laptops or other mobile devices.

Savings and Productivity increases

Unified Communications provide instant savings in terms of costs and time. It cuts down on communication, operational and maintenance (via one combined network solution) costs and facilitates effective, smart and time-saving unified connectivity between employees, customers and vendors alike. This translates into higher ROI across the board and increased agility to adapt to market changes.

Scalability

Leveraging on the technologies provided by both Cisco and Microsoft, Knowledge Plus' end to end Unified Communications solutions are designed to enable you to factor in future growth strategies.
